

Bio: Lianne Hannaway

Lianne Hannaway is a Chartered Professional Accountant, an experienced financial executive, an investor and founder of Wealthnuvo. Lianne helps first-generation business owners and investors bringing in 6 figures or more but not seeing that in their bank account achieve financial freedom by taking control of their finances. Her professional mission is to help women, especially women of colour, reach their financial goals allowing them to live better and impact the lives of their families, our communities and our economy.

Lianne believes change begins in the boardroom and is most recognized for her article in the Institute for Research on Public Policy magazine, Policy Options, entitled “How can boards create anti-racist companies?” She is a Board Member and Treasurer at The Equality Fund, a groundbreaking collaboration that supports women’s rights organizations and feminist movements globally with a backing of $300 million from the Canadian government. She is also a board member of Kids Help Phone, Canada’s only 24/7, national support service providing professional online and telephone counselling and volunteer-led, text-based support to youth across Canada in both English and French.

Previously, Lianne was an advisory partner at KPMG, and held a variety of senior finance roles at TMX Group. She holds a Chartered Accountant designation, a Bachelor of Mathematics and a Masters of Accounting both from the University of Waterloo.
